DIPLOMACY.

It is observed that a number of the Canadian newspapers are criticizing Sir Charles Tupper because they allege that the proposed fisheries treaty is all in favor of the United States and against Canadian interests. In this country a number of newspapers are criticizing the treaty on the ground that it favors the Canadians rather than our own citizens.

In Government circles this sort of thing is known as diplomacy. When any great question like this is to be settled, the Governments never think of sending some good hard-headed business man to talk matters over, but with great fuss and feathers send a lot of diplomats. They sit in a large room for several weeks, with a ponderous lot of ceremony, and their main idea is to get up a long document which they do not understand themselves, and which they are morally certain no one else will.

None of the Commission dare to ask for any more lucidity of expression, for that would be taken as an admission of ignorance, and they all look as wise as possible and pretend to each other that they know just what everything means. Then the document is solemnly signed by the Commission, being careful where any specially plain statement is made, to re-arrange the language so that the idea will be reached in some round-about diplomatic language, or left out entirely.

Then the document is telegraphed all over the country and nobody understands a blasted line of it. Then Congress meets and ratifies it, and a few more Commissioners have to go and investigate what the exact meaning of the other side was, and the parties most affected are completely at sea, and go right on in the old way.

Then the matter gets so mixed up that the parties in the interests go to law, and the Courts and lawyers have another meeting to arrive at the meaning, but fail, and the case after being decided goes to a higher court, and then it lies a few years in the Supreme Court of the United States, where two opinions are reached, a portion of the Court going one way and the rest going the other.

The men who have brought about all this misunderstanding are called diplomats, and pictures of their heavy intellectual heads are printed in the illustrated newspapers and sent all over the country, so that in case of a Presidential campaign they may be mentioned as fit persons to run a nation of business men, like the great and glorious Republic in which we live.

Hon. Roscoe Conkling sent a letter to the Secretary of a Republican club named after him, in which he says, referring to the club's proposition to make him a Presidential candidate: "Without reference to candidates, it will be a great satisfaction if the club bearing my name shall contribute in any way to reinstate the organization whose wisdom and earnestness proved so useful in the most tragic and trying period of our history. To see that party again triumphant and united, worthy of itself and of its past, the brave and honest champion of the rights, the welfare and the progress of sixty-three millions of people, is inspiration enough for all Republicans."

"Lady Clare Vere de Vere," said Queen Victoria to one of the ladies of the royal household the other day, "hand me the morning paper, it contains my speech in Parliament yesterday, and I have not yet read it. I have a woman's curiosity to know what I said on that occasion."

—Arthur Colton, the famous Tichborne claimant, announces that in a few weeks his lawyer will "shake all England" by beginning the battle over again with plenty of new evidence to establish his identity. The claimant is now employed in a Brooklyn cafe, and weighs 365 pounds.

—A number of opium cases have been brought before the Grand Jury at Tacoma, W. T., and startling developments are expected.

—Charles Maynard, who got out of the Oregon State Prison by professing religion, is accused of robbing a Catholic Church at Portland.

—Last Saturday the first train of cars passed over the high trestle at Weaver creek. They will be running into Placerville in a few days.

—Insurance men are investigating the recent fire at Wagner's grocery at Los Angeles, Cal., several suspicious circumstances pointing to incendiarism.

—The land-jumpers at Salt Lake have lost their claims. Judge Zane says it is the duty of the Mayor to have the property sold, as is provided by the law.

—There was another fight at the Mexican Custom House at Nogales early Tuesday morning. Several shots were fired, and one wounded man is expected to die.

—The Lyon County Times says: It is strange that our town, located so close as it is to an agricultural and dairy country, seldom has a roll of butter in it that is fit to eat.

—The last jurors who disagreed over the case of Mrs. Rozelle, the vitriol-thrower at Los Angeles, made her a present of $10, the result of a collection among the jurors before they left the court-room.

—The United States Inspectors declare that the collision of the railroad ferry-boat Tacoma with the British bark Rohilla at Kalama, W. T., was unavoidable and that neither of the Captains was to blame.

—Earnest Soule, who was killed by the cars at New Orleans on the 24 inst., was a son of Andrew Soule, of Healdsburg. He was on his way home from Cincinnati, where he had recently graduated from a medical college.

—The Winnemucca Silver State says: The Indians are happy. They say the sagehens are having a fandango, which is a sure sign of Spring, and are more palatable to them than beef.
